

Baza Wiedzy > Using Deskpro > Admin > Why are some automatic Replies added as an Agent Note?

Why are some automatic Replies added as an Agent Note?

Lewis O'Connor - 2023-08-29 - Komentarze \(0\) - Admin

Some automatic email responses will get added to the Ticket Thread as an Agent Note so that the automatic reply does not affect the status of the ticket (e.g. changing it from Awaiting User to Awaiting Agent).

The screenshot displays a ticket thread interface with two tabs: "Messages" and "History". The "Messages" tab is active, showing two items:

- AGENT NOTE: A purple-bordered box containing the text "I will be away from the office for the rest of today." It includes a timestamp of "11 mins", a count of "#2", and a circular profile icon with the initials "JH".
- EMAIL: An orange-bordered box representing an email reply. It shows the recipient as "To: JH Joe Hancock (j.hancock@deskpro.com)". The email body contains the text: "Hello Joe," followed by "I hope that we have been able to help you with your query, but if there is anything else that we can do to help, please get in touch." and "Kind Regards,". It includes a timestamp of "12 mins", a count of "#1", and a circular profile icon of a person.

In order for the reply to be recognized in this manner, the subject of the reply must contain certain prefixes (which is why this won't be the behavior for all automatic replies).

Deskpro currently looks for the following prefixes:

- Delivery Status Notification <original subject>
- Undeliverable: <original subject>
- Out of Office: <original subject>
- Automatic reply: <original subject>
- Out of Office AutoReply: <original subject>
- Autosvar: <original subject>
- Recall: <original subject>